

JAMES R. OYLER

Background

Has held senior positions in consulting and corporate management leading to twelve years as CEO of NASDAQ-listed public company, and was founder and President of several startup companies. Products include electronics, mechanical systems, and biofuels, in both commercial and defense applications. Has had proven success in developing and executing new product and business plans.

Experience

Booz, Allen & Hamilton: Senior associate managing worldwide assignments in organization, strategy, marketing, and operations, leading to management of the firm's Energy Practice. Locations in Washington and New York.

Harris Corporation: Sector President for Information Systems, responsible for nine divisions with sales of $650M and more than 5,000 employees. As member of senior executive group, helped define strategy to refocus company on communications technologies. Strategy has been exceptionally successful for Harris and its customers and shareholders.

AMG, Inc.: Founder and President of startup developing technology for rapid freeze-drying of delicate materials including pharmaceuticals. Was awarded several patents.

Evans & Sutherland: President and CEO of company producing advanced graphics and simulation products. Developed several new businesses and numerous spinoffs, prior to selling the simulation business. Company emerged with dominant market share and continues as a market leader under Rockwell Collins, its new owner.

Genifuel Corporation: Founder and President of startup company to develop and produce biofuels using innovative patented technology.

Education

- BSEE from Lehigh University, Bethlehem, PA, 1967
- Master's Degree from Cambridge University, Cambridge England, 1969
- Certified Management Accountant (CMA) with significant depth in financial analysis and management.

Other

- Served as officer in US Army, 1969-1972.
- Holds nine patents or patents pending.
- Served as national director of American Electronics Association, Chairman of Utah Information Technology Association, Trustee of Utah Symphony and Opera, and many other technical and service positions.